| 3) General Driving Tips (3DRT) |
-----+

Here are some basic things to help you out in your racing.

- Tune your car evenly for best driving balance. (For example do not only buy power upgrades, because if you do not buy anything else the cars handling will become poor.)
- Try to learn to use the manual transmission because you can choose to stay in a gear going up a hill for maximum power, or you can shift up a gear to get the most out of the hill.
- Do not waste money buying Aero Parts, everything is just for show, so unless seeing your car stock really bothers you do not waste your money in Aero Parts, save the money for performance modifications.
- Work on your car settings test them out, if you like them, keep them, if you do not like them change them.
- Practice the turns on the course, find places where you are quick and race tough opponents there.

The highway has been limited to C1 Circuit since C1 Inner Circuit and C1 Outer Circuit are opposite directions of the same highway and share the same features.

C1 Circuit: This course is slightly faster than C1 Outer Circuit due to the slightly looser turns. The eastern section of the highway is fast since it is fairly straight and is a great area to outrace the faster opponents because they will brake heavily in this area. If your vehicle has exceptional handling then you are best suited to race your rivals on the western part of the highway. While it is not a very technical area you still get an edge over the opponents since they will ride the brakes through here. The rest of the interstate loop (which is a little under 10 miles) is free game.
