 I. "YOU HAD ME FROM HELLO"
 (INTRODUCTION)

Hello! I'm Arashinonatsu and this is my second guide for Harvest Moon. I've compiled as much information as I could to endeavor to make the best in-depth relationship guide for Harvest Moon: Friends of Mineral Town (FoMT) and Harvest Moon: More Friends of Mineral Town, the alternate "for girls" version of FoMT. More Friends is commonly referred to as MFoMT, an acronym I despise and find quite awkward. Therefore, I will **always** use the acronym MoFo ('Mo're 'F'riends 'o'f) and shamelessly encourage you to use it as well.

**NOTE!* This guide has information pertaining **only** to these two (2) versions of Harvest Moon for the Game Boy Advance. I cannot help with any other game.

This guide includes information on how to befriend and/or woo not just the ten main and four special marriageable characters, but also how to befriend the local townspeople. Eventually, I hope to include the Harvest Sprites and your farm animals as well. Though the guide is clearly unfinished, it still contains a lot of information for both the new and advanced player.

Later in the guide, you will notice that every character has an astrological sign. This is NOT an official stat. It is only my personal humble opinion.

Because this guide is so large, if you need something specific, you should make use of the Ctrl+F "Find" feature in most browsers and text editing programs. Pressing 'Ctrl+F' should bring up the search bar to type in the section or character you are looking for. ^_^

II. "THE SWEETEST DAYS"
(CALENDAR OF EVENTS)

Years in harvest Moon are comprised of four seasons: Spring, Summer, Autumn (Fall), and Winter. Each season consists of 30 days. It's important to keep track of dates; many crops, events, and even characters are season-specific. There is an uneditable calendar where festival days are circled located on the wall of your home. Birthdays and anniversaries you will have to keep track of on your own.

All the characters in the game have a birthday, but each of the marriage candidates have an alternate birthday. If you choose your birthday at the start of the game and the date you chose falls on a bachelorette/bachelor's regular birthday, their birthday will instead be on the alternate day. For example, if you choose Summer 03 for your character's birthday, the game will automatically change Popuri's birthday to her alternate day of Summer 10.

Often the day before a festival, or certain events, someone will come to your house first thing in the morning to remind you. Be careful. If you oversleep, teleport out, sleep until the next day, or hang out in the bathroom for too long, you may miss an important house call.

III.          "LOOKING FOR LOVE"
          (HOW TO MAKE FRIENDS AND BABIES)

The first thing to do is to familiarize yourself with where everything is and when they open. There are two ways to bring up a view of the Town Map. One is to press 'Start', which brings up the menu at the bottom of the screen, then move the cursor to the map icon and press 'A'. The other method is to press the 'Left Shoulder Button' and 'Start' at the same time. That will bring up the map automatically. The map will have locations for and briefly explain each major area, and show the hours of many businesses.

There are many benefits to making friends in Mineral Town. You don't have to be friends with everyone, you don't even have to be friends with *anyone*, but you'll lose out on the major theme and charm of the game if you play the loner. Every character in the game has a friendship meter that rises or falls based on your actions. They start off very neutral towards you, but that can easily change. You can raise or lower friendship points in a number of different ways. Friendship levels will increase if you:

- Attend a festival (only increases for the people who are also attending).
- Confess to Carter that no one likes you and you are forgiven.
- Give someone a gift that they like.

Friendship levels will decrease if you:

- Display Golden Lumber.
- Give someone a gift that they don't like.
- Litter!

I'm going to explain littering because it decreases friendship points by a noticeable amount, and many players don't realize that it affects friendship points at all. When you throw an item onto the ground and the item disappears, the game considers this to be littering. Throwing things into the water is also considered littering. The penalty gets even steeper during festivals. You should know that there is a garbage can in Rose Square where you can safely toss your garbage.

However, if you really want to throw something away, and you can't get to Rose Square, just go into your rucksack. Move the pointer to the item that you want to throw away and press 'Start'. It will ask you if you want to throw the item away. No penalties! This works for your rucksack, the refrigerator, the shelf, and the Tool box! Also, a neat trick to know is that pressing the 'A' and 'B' buttons at the same time will allow you to automatically access your rucksack at any time. This will come in handy when you can't access the start menu during events and festivals.

There are a number of aspects in the game that change when you become friends with people. Characters will change their dialogue. Some may even give you a recipe to add to your cookbook, or other valuable gifts and opportunities. You may receive letters and cards in the mail, and special character events can be unlocked. Some people will allow you to visit them earlier, stay later, or even enter a locked room. Friendship can also lead to marriage.

III.01. Gift Points

You can give a gift to any character in the game. However, you can't just give anything to anyone. Each of the characters have different personalities, and therefore, different tastes. They don't all like the same things. Just because Basil loves Red Grass, doesn't mean his wife Anna does too. Giving someone an item that they like will raise their friendship points for you. Giving them something that they dislike will do the opposite.

The townspeople will start out with an affection for you at a neutral setting of about 49 or 50 friendship points (maximum 255). Marriage candidates will start with their affection for you at 0 points (maximum 65,535). While the gift point table is listed below for both, some people may find it easier to imagine that the Bachelorette/Bachelor points apply to the townspeople as well. Please feel free to do so. It may not be as accurate, but it does work very nicely.

	Bachelorettes/Bachelors	Townspeople
	-----	-----
Special Favorite Items:	+800 Points	n/a
Loved Items:	+500 Points	+9
Liked Items:	+300 Points	+3
Neutral Items:	+100 Points	+1
Disliked Items:	-500 Points	-3
Hated Items:	-800 Points	-9

You can give someone a gift as is, or you can have it gift-wrapped at the Supermarket for 100G. If the item is something that the recipient will love, the gift-wrapping will boost the amount of friendship points received by 125%. If the item is something that they hate, their points will plummet down by the same amount. The same holds true for a person's birthday. Giving a character a gift that they love on their birthday will give the item's points a boost by at least 500% (625% gift-wrapped)!

You can give gifts to the same person multiple times per day. The first time will yield the full amount of points, but every gift after that will be less effective than the first (becoming only 1/3 of the normal point value). I wouldn't recommend giving the same person more than five gifts per day, nine at the most.

Sometimes you may actually want to lower someone's friendship level for you. This can be especially true in regards to triggering Heart Events and Rival Heart events explained in the next section. In that case, you will want to give that individual character a hated gift for a while. This is the best way, as it won't affect any other characters' levels.

Remember that raising or lowering someone's friendship levels may take no time at all, or they may take several weeks of repeated gift-giving. Just keep your eyes on the goal and remain vigilant.

III.02. Heart Levels
-----

Marriage candidates have a visibly beating heart on their chest when you talk to them. The heart will grow bigger and change colors as they care for you more. There are seven Heart Levels, which you can think of like a backwards rainbow. Here they are, from lowest to highest.

Black >> Purple >> Blue >> Green >> Yellow >> Orange >> Red

The point system for the Heart Levels works basically like this:

Black Heart =	0 - 9,999 Points
Purple Heart =	10,000 - 19,999 Points
Blue Heart =	20,000 - 29,999 Points
Green Heart =	30,000 - 39,999 Points
Yellow Heart =	40,000 - 49,999 Points
Orange Heart =	50,000 - 59,999 Points
Red Heart =	60,000 - 65,535 Points

Obviously you can't see where the exact points are at, but you'll at least be able to do a "guess-timate".

Now, some characters have invisible heart levels. These secret marriage candidates are the Gourmet, Harvest Goddess, Kappa, and Won. Because they already have extra requirements and situations making them difficult to marry, these characters do not have a rival love.

As the marriage candidates move up in Heart Levels, there are certain "boost" events that you can trigger to make their love points raise considerably. These are called Heart Events and they are triggered at four specific levels. These levels are:

Black >> Purple >> Blue >> Yellow

Heart Events are basically a cinema cut-scene that you trigger by entering a certain area at a certain time. They involve a choice on your part. The wrong answer will cause your friend's love points to drop by a lot. The right answer will cause the love points to raise.

If you raise someone's Heart Level too fast, it's possible that you can wind up skipping a Heart Event. If the Heart Level becomes too high, it will prevent you from viewing a lower event. For example, in FoMT, if you get Elli to Purple Heart before seeing her Black Heart event, you will not be able to trigger the Black Heart event at all (or any subsequent events). You will have to work to lower her Heart Level back down. You canNOT get married to a character without seeing each of that character's four Heart Events.

Take your time! These particular HM games don't actually end, so there is no real rush to get married immediately. However, it's important to know that you have rivals in love. Each potential spouse (except the secret bachelorette/bachelors) has another person vying for their attention. The rival couples are:

Elli == Doctor
Karen == Rick
Mary == Gray
Popuri == Kai

Each of your rivals have four heart events too. You trigger them by entering a certain area at a certain time. These cinemas don't involve any other interaction on your part. Make sure that you keep track of which events you've triggered. There is no visible way to tell which heart level your rival's love is at. These events are also triggered at four specific levels, but they are slightly different than the ones for your Heart Events. These levels are:

Black >> Blue >> Green >> Orange

*NOTE! The Green Rival Event can ONLY be triggered in the second year or later. The Orange Rival Event can ONLY be triggered in the fourth year or later.

The fate of your rivals' relationships rests in your hands. They will not marry unless you trigger their Rival Heart events. You will not be able to trigger a rival's heart event if the subject likes you better than your rival. For example, in FoMT, let's say you wanted to see Karen and Rick's Green Heart event. You won't be able to trigger it if she has a Yellow (or higher) heart for you. You would have to lower her heart back down to Green or below.

Thankfully, this stipulation does not go both ways. You can safely view the Rival Heart events before triggering your own, even if the object of your affections has a Black Heart for you. You can also raise the hearts of each bachelorette/bachelor without affecting the other bachelorettes/bachelors. The only thing is that you must NOT trigger your rival's Orange Heart event. Once you trigger a rival's Orange Heart event, the two will marry in seven days. If the wedding will fall on a holiday, it will instead occur on the next regular day following that holiday. Only trigger that event if you want them to get married.

III.03. The Legend Of The Blue Feather

*NOTE! This story is NOT official, nor is it mine. It is a wonderful, original tale woven by Freyashawk (see Section XI.02) to explain the tradition. She has graciously allowed me to use this story in my guide. But I must reiterate that, no matter how much I wish it was, this story is neither mine nor canon.

"In the first days of mankind, when people were learning about life in all its complexities and splendour, there was a very shy boy named Kuko. He was very much in love with the daughter of the chief of his tribe, but was too shy to say anything to her. Instead, he would leave a white flower at her door each morning and then walk past her house later to see if his gift had been accepted.

The White Flower was a rare and beautiful blossom that could be found only at the top of the highest mountain. Each evening, Kuko would climb the mountain to search for the elusive flower and he would not return to his village without it. To him, it represented the rare emotion that had blossomed in his own heart. Every day, his heart rose when he saw that the flower no longer lay on the doorstep. He imagined his beloved would understand that her own beauty was reflected in the exquisite loveliness of the White Flower.

Then one day, a delegation of strangers came to the village. They brought an offering of marriage from the son of a neighbouring chieftain. Donkeys laden with gold, chests filled with precious gems and baskets filled with grains, vegetables and fruit accompanied the proposal of marriage.

Poor Kuko! His heart sank when he saw the ostentatious procession and heard the admiring exclamations of the villagers. All he had to offer was the simple White Flower. In fact, as the delegation entered the home of the village chieftain, their heavy boots trampled Kuko's offering into the dust. Kuko could not imagine that the girl would prefer him to the son of a wealthy chief. He was a poor shepherd boy who owned only a couple of sheep and two chickens who never had laid a single golden egg.

In despair that evening, he went to the Spring of the Goddess to think. It was a favourite spot of his, a place he often visited when life appeared darkest. According to legend, the Harvest Goddess lived in the lake and granted the wishes of deserving individuals who sought her aid. Kuko imagined the Goddess to be as compassionate as she would be beautiful, and he poured his heart out to her in the twilight, speaking of his dreams and hopes, his disappointments and his struggles. Ordinarily rather inarticulate and shy, Kuko found he was able to speak freely to the Goddess he could not see but whom he sensed to be ever-present in the sparkling waters of the Spring.

That evening, when he finally fell silent, he was surprised by the appearance of an exquisite blue bird flying across the sky. The bird circled overhead three times, then dropped a feather into his lap. The feather was long and iridescent, and Kuko never had beheld anything quite as beautiful. Kuko was startled, but even more astonished when the bird actually spoke to him.

'I am the Namimoto bird, who makes her nest in the very lap of the Goddess,' the bird sang. 'She bids me tell you to take heart. Give this Blue Feather to the girl you love and if her heart beats true for you, she will be yours.'

Kuko bowed low to the sacred bird, thanking her for the rare gift. He then returned to the village, feather in hand, and laid it upon the doorstep of his beloved. He could not sleep, however, and was at her door at dawn to see if the feather remained where he had left it.

Much to his joy, the feather was gone!

As he stood there, the chief of the village, his daughter and the entire delegation of strangers came out of the house, and the village crier began to ring the bell, calling the villager to a meeting. All the villagers congregated in the Square, pressing forward to hear the news. Poor Kuko was afraid suddenly that it would be an announcement that the Chief's daughter had agreed to accept the offer of marriage from the neighbouring Chief's son.

Instead, he beheld his lady love stepping forward with the Blue Feather braided into her golden hair. In a clear voice, she declared:

'I will marry only the man who can tell me where the bird to which this feather belongs lives.'

Her father then spoke: 'Three days from now, we will have another meeting and at that time, we will hear the answer to my daughter's question.'

Kuko realized that the Chief intended to give the neighbouring Chief's son a chance to discover the answer to the girl's question. The next three days passed far too slowly, therefore, for poor Kuko, who knew the answer himself, but did not know if his rival would be able to stand forth to give the correct answer as well.

After three days had passed, the bells rang out again and the villagers collected in the Square. The delegation returned and this time, the neighbouring Chief's son was with them. Much to Kuko's consternation, he was a handsome lad, but with arrogance stamped in his features. His bearing moreover denoted one accustomed to having his own way in everything. Kuko's rival stepped forward then, as if he and he alone had the right to speak first.

He declared loudly, 'Here is my answer to your question: I have sent men to every corner of our land, and no one has seen a bird with feathers like this. I therefore declare with confidence that the bird is foreign to these parts, and must be from a land very faraway.'

'Yes!' agreed the Chief happily, 'That must be so. We have our answer here.'

'And yet,' said the girl, 'That is no answer at all. It does not tell me where to find the bird.'

Kuko stepped forward then. Much to his surprise, when he spoke, he did not stutter as usual. His voice was firm and melodious as he said, 'I have seen the bird you seek. This bird will not be found anywhere in our land or in any other, for she makes her nest in the very lap of the Goddess. She is the Namimoto bird, favoured by the Harvest Goddess above all others.'

The villagers were amazed, not only by Kuko's words but by his transformation into a confident young man who had neither hesitation nor fear.

'How do you know this?' the Chief demanded with a frown.

'The bird gave me the Blue Feather,' said Kuko. 'It is a symbol of true love, for the man who offers this feather to a girl declares: 'My heart flies to you, even as a bird flies to its nest. I wish to dwell in your heart forever.' That is the message of the Blue Feather and that is why I offer it to your daughter. I am your humble servant, sir, but my heart has the highest of aspirations, to belong to your daughter forever.'

Every one was captivated by the boy's words and even the Chief could not maintain his stern disapproval, although the thought of losing all the advantages that an alliance with the neighbouring Chief would have provided was disappointing. Even so, he loved his daughter and her happiness was more important than riches. The Chief's daughter looked at the son of the neighbouring Chief, then at Kuko.

'I always loved you,' she told the young shepherd. 'Each morning, I would watch from my window as you brought a beautiful White Flower to my door. I always hoped you would speak to me one day of your love.'

She took his hand then in her own and announced, 'I accept your Blue Feather and your heart. From this day forward, let the Blue Feather be a sign of eternal love for every man and woman who wishes to marry.'

And so it came to pass that the 'Blue Feather' became the symbol of love and accompanied every proposal of marriage through all the centuries."

III.04. Marriage And Beyond

When you've gotten a bachelorette/bachelor to Orange Heart level, the Blue Feather will be available for sale (1,000 G) at the Supermarket. Traditionally in Mineral Town, the Blue Feather is given to your love as a marriage proposal. If s/he accepts, you will marry seven days from that date. If the wedding will fall on a holiday, it will instead occur on the next regular day following that holiday.

The Blue Feather is considered a 'tool' rather than an 'item', and will be stored in the 'Tools' section of your rucksack or in your Tool box. But just because you have the Blue Feather doesn't mean your proposal will be accepted. Your love can, and will, turn you down if you haven't met all the marriage requirements. In order to marry, you must first:

- Have your love at Red Heart level.
- Propose using the Blue Feather.
- View each of your love's four heart events in order.
- Own all items sold from the TV Shopping Network.
- Have the largest (final) house upgrade.
- Being friends with your love's relatives is NOT a requirement, but it will boost your chances of being accepted on the first try.

*NOTE! After you get married, the game credits roll and become one of your archived letters. This is NOT the end of the game! It's annoying to sit through, but when the credits are finished, the game will continue normally.

After the wedding, your spouse will move into your home and ask if they can call you by a nickname. This includes Kai, who will move to Mineral Town and be available during all seasons. The Gourmet, Harvest Goddess, and Kappa are exceptions. They will not move in with you. You will also be given the option to allow your love to continue working or become a stay-at-home spouse. Having a housewife/husband is completely a matter of personal choice. They don't actually do anything or help on the farm if they stay home. They will constantly just pace alongside the dinner table. This option is also not available for certain characters. Elli, Mary, and Won will not quit their jobs after marriage.

Once you're married, the heart on the chests of the other bachelorettes/bachelors will disappear and only your spouse's heart will remain. Keep in mind that even though their hearts are invisible, they still have the same amount of affection for you. If you plan to marry them off, you will need to lower their heart levels back down if they are too high to trigger the rival events.

Your spouse will also appear in your inventory alongside your dog and your horse. Keeping your spouse's level consistently at Red Heart will keep them happy and their love for you will grow. You will be able to see this on your inventory screen. Your spouse has a maximum of ten hearts. There is no divorce in this game, so you can't change spouses ever. If your spouse becomes unhappy with you, and their heart level falls too low, s/he will just move out. Talk to your love and give them a nice gift everyday to prevent this. If you can maintain them at ten hearts, you will soon find yourself expecting a baby.

Pregnancy lasts about two seasons. If you are playing FoMT, your wife will have a baby boy. If you are playing MoFo, you will give birth to a baby girl. Your new baby will also appear in your inventory, which means that the baby, as well, has a heart level. You can't pick up your baby, only give her/him gifts and talk to her/him. Your baby will also only grow to toddler stage. S/he will never grow any older and canNOT help on the farm. You will only have one child.

Your spouse will usually bake a cake on a special occasion. Better make sure you know if this occasion is her/his birthday, your birthday, or your anniversary. S/he will get angry if you give the wrong answer. And if you stay married for 50 years, your spouse will buy you a Mountain Cottage for your anniversary! ^_^

III.05. The Other Couples

As stated previously, once you trigger a rival's Orange Heart event, the two will marry in seven days. If the wedding will fall on a holiday, it will instead occur on the next regular day following that holiday. If you're good friends with your rival, you will be invited to the wedding. First thing in the morning, on the day of the wedding, your rival will be waiting outside your door to invite you. You automatically accept, view a cinema of the wedding, and wake up the next morning.

If you aren't invited to the wedding, you can still view it by going in the church on the wedding day anytime between 6AM and 10PM. Carter will ask you if you want to join in the festivities. If you accept, you will view a cinema of the wedding and wake up the next morning. If you decline, you will be able to talk to everyone in the church. Your rival will even give you a poor excuse for not inviting you.

After their wedding, the other couple may move in with each other, or change their schedules slightly. Also, the couple will never have a child. If Popuri and Kai get married, Popuri will leave with Kai and only be available during the Summer.

Coming Eventually!

IV. "YOU COULD BE THE ONE"
(THE MAIN BACHELOTTES/BACHELORS)

This section lists the ten main marriage candidates in Harvest Moon. In FoMT, you can marry Ann, Elli, Karen, Mary, or Popuri. In MoFo, you can marry Cliff, the Doctor, Gray, Kai, or Rick. You canNOT get married to a character of the same gender. However, in MoFo, you can trigger each girl's Black Heart event, which is considered a bonus "friendship" event.

*NOTE! I only have the points values for the girls' heart events (thanks to Samurai Goroh and The King Of This Game), so if anyone has the values for the boys' events, please e-mail me! ^_^

----- IV.02. Cliff -----

Description: Cliff is a poor wanderer who winds up in Mineral Town. His long reddish-brown hair is normally pulled back into a loose ponytail. Very soft-spoken and shy, he has no money and is usually with Carter at the Church. His situation is actually very dire and due to lack of funds, he will leave town forever at the end of the first year. He will NEVER come back. If you choose, you can prevent this by inviting him to help you at the Winery job on Autumn 14. Duke and Manna will then offer him a permanent position which will allow him to stay in town indefinitely.

V. "SECRET LOVERS"
(SPECIAL BACHELORETTES/BACHELORS)

Each game has a special character you can attempt to marry. In FoMT, you can try to marry the Harvest Goddess. In MoFo, you actually get three; you can try to marry the Gourmet, Kappa, and Won. These characters are very difficult, as they involve extra requirements and may not be as readily available as the main marriage candidates. They also have invisible heart levels, so you won't know if and when you get them to Red Heart.

V.01. The Gourmet
-----

Description: The robust and rotund Gourmet travels to towns all around the world, tasting all that they have to offer. Everyone bows to his discerning palate and he is quite famous. Each year, he comes and judges the Cooking Festival in Mineral Town, but in MoFo, he is also a character that you can marry.

V.02. The Harvest Goddess

Description: The beautiful aqua-haired Harvest Goddess is Mineral Town's local deity. When it comes to offerings and tributes, she tells it like it is. Confident and powerful, if she likes you, she may grant you a gift. In FoMT, she is also a character that you can marry.

In order to talk to the Harvest Goddess, you have to visit her where she lives. Just next to the Hot Springs, there is a waterfall which flows into a small pool. This area is known as the Harvest Goddess's Pond/Pool. Throw an item into the pool to make an offering to the Goddess and cause her to appear. Remember that *anything* you throw into that pond is considered as giving her a gift!

V.03. Kappa

Description: The anti-social, gruff and green Kappa is Mineral Town's very own lake demon. He loves cucumbers and being left alone, but in MoFo, he is also a character that you can marry.

In order to talk to Kappa, you have to visit him where he lives. Kappa lives in the large lake at the base of Mother's Hill. This is why the lake is also often called Kappa's Lake. Throw a Cucumber into the lake to cause him to appear. Even though he almost always refuses to talk to you, he really does love receiving Cucumbers. Kappa is not available during the Winter.

Where: Entering Kai's Restaurant
When: Any day / Sunny / Summer Only / 5pm - 7pm

Kai is sad because he can't seem to get many customers at all. Suddenly Popuri shows up announcing that she's brought guests with her. A bunch of the townspeople show up and Kai is happy, but then more and more *and more* people start arriving. Overwhelmed, he asks you to help him and you automatically agree. You and Popuri spend the rest of the evening helping him in the restaurant, and once he closes for the night, you leave and automatically wake up the next morning.

X.02. Festivals

Festival 15: Starry Night Festival
-----

Winter 23 - Winter 24

The Starry Night festival is slightly different depending on which version of the game you're playing.

FoMT: On Winter 23, talk to a girl that has a Green Heart or higher for you. She will invite you to spend the holiday with her at her home. If you accept her invitation, then after 6pm the next evening (Winter 24), you should meet her at her home to trigger the cut scene. When the event fully ends, you will wake up at your own home the next morning. If you are already married, instead of having dinner with your wife's family, the two of you will have dinner at home. Just enter your home between noon and 6pm on Winter 24.

MoFo: On Winter 23, Mayor Thomas should be at your door in the morning with invitations from all the bachelors that have a Green Heart or higher for you. You should only accept one, and then after 6pm the next evening (Winter 24), you should meet the accepted bachelor at his home to trigger the event. After that, the two of you will travel back to your house for dinner, and if it's your first time participating in the Starry Night Festival, he'll give you a ring. After that he leaves and you wake up the next morning. If you are already married, instead of having dinner with your husband's family, the two of you will have dinner at home. Just enter your home between noon and 6pm on Winter 24.

*Note! If you are unmarried and want to participate in this event, make sure that you save your game the evening of Winter 21. Go to sleep and the next morning, check the weather report for Winter 23. If a blizzard is scheduled, do NOT save the game. Reload and repeat until the forecast is sunny or snowy. Blizzards trap you inside your house for the entire day, which means that you won't be able to go outside and talk to any of the girls or Mayor Thomas and accept your invitation. That means you can't trigger the event on Winter 24 and you'll have to wait until next year to try to see the event.

Autumn Horse Races, Beach Day, Chicken Festival, Cooking Festival, Cow Festival, Fireworks Festival, Full Moon Festival, Harvest Festival, Music Festival, New Year's Festival, Pumpkin Festival, Sheep Festival, Spring Horse Races, Spring Thanksgiving Festival, Stocking Festival,

XI.01. Email Policy

Harvest Moon-related mail only, please. E-mails with no subjects WILL be deleted. Use this subject: HM Ultimate Guide. Also, please don't e-mail me before using the spell-checker. It's very painful. :-)

Please feel free to view my fan art and fanfiction located on my homepage. However, please use my e-mail to send me messages and questions related to this guide. I haven't been able to play as often, so updates are very slow-going, but I'll answer any emailed questions to the best of my abilities. ^_^

XI.02. Special Thanks To...

ALLIE C. for bringing FoMT home and spreading the addiction around.
EVERYONE else out there for being just as obsessed as I am with this game, and most especially for reading my guide(s). Thank you also for writing in with corrections and additions! It is so very much appreciated. ^_^

FANFICTION.NET for renewing my interest in the game each time I start to get bored with it.

FREYASHAWK --<http://harvestmoonforever.blogspot.com/>-- for giving me permission to use her original 'Legend of the Blue Feather' story. How I wish it was canon! Everyone should check out her numerous wonderful walkthroughs and her HM blog!

GAMEFAQS.COM for being what it is and having what it has. You can't describe it better than that.

GOOGLE for helping me find a lot of the information I was missing and confirming my theories.

JAIME H. for the use of his laptop with which I finished the first version of this guide! Yeeaaahhh!!!

JONATHAN G. for starting the chain reaction of the Harvest Moon obsession.

LIZ S. for helping me with confirming and missing information (especially the stuff regarding Rick).

MARVELOUS, NATSUME, NINTENDO, and VICTOR INTERACTIVE for all of Harvest Moon!

SAMURAI GOROH and THE KING OF THIS GAME for granting me permission to use their points system information and correcting the friendship points info. More details on this can be found in their full, excellent FAQ: --<http://www.gamefaqs.com/portable/gbadvance/file/589702/28030-->

SARAH P. for helping me with confirming, proofreading, missing/conflicting information, as well as the astrological info.

USHI NO TANE --<http://www.fogu.com/hm/>-- for explaining certain events that I didn't remember or hadn't yet triggered.

XI.03. Version History

Version 1.0

Posted on 03/29/08. Satisfied with walkthrough enough to submit it online.

Version 2.0

Posted on 12/02/09. Fixed some small stuff here and there. Added info on accessing the Town Map. Corrected Doctor's birthday. Removed 'confessing and not being forgiven' as a friendship decriaser. Added friendship point info for the townspeople. Added info on giving multiple gifts per day and rival heart levels after marriage. Added a placeholder for Section III.06. Adjusted Gray's schedule. Added locations for the Harvest Goddess and Kappa. Added info for the 'Customers For Kai' event and the 'Starry Night Festival'.

"Anyway, thanks very much! Do you always give presents to the townspeople, like if you're going to give them to some, you have to give to everybody, now! Not just the pretty girls, you hear?! Ha ha... Anyway, thanks again!"
