Introduction

This was written mainly due to me realizing that there were not any Battle Chip Code Location FAQs for the site. Some of the walkthroughs noted where to get the one-time mystery data and one even had some data on random mystery data, but there was no information on drops after battle. After some painstaking time, I tried to compile all the information that I could find, even if it meant playing the game multiple times.

Feel free to tell me things about the FAQ, such as where a chip in a specific code is actually found in spots I don't have listed. Everything I've listed can be found in that specific location; whether it's easy to find there is another story completely. Howitzer As can be found in random mystery data, though good luck actually managing to get one.

All chips, except for 176. Bass F, can be found in the chip trader. I believe the chip trader itself is rigged to give certain chips in certain codes if you don't already have one - notably, Dropdown B, which is required for an in-game trade with an NPC and is practically impossible to get from the enemy since it's a rare drop at a high rank.

The 3-chip trader and the 10-chip trader, if you choose to go that route, are located in Higsby's shop.

Some chips are listed as chip trader exclusive, meaning that's the only place to get them. If you find that the chips aren't chip trader exclusive, please tell me! I do lurk on the Battle Network 1 boards, and a simple topic will get my attention quite fast.

Some chips will have the same ranks required for it to drop it. If this is the case, like with TriSpear (G, H, I, and J all drop at 9 Rank, though some are rarer than the others), then it all comes down to luck and how likely it is to drop at that rank.

The names for the viruses used are from the later games where the viruses are named in-battle, or from E-Reader cards, or just transliterations of the original Japanese name for the virus.

In regards to Mystery Data - if you've played later games in the series, you'll note that blue Mystery Data are one-time, green Mystery Data are random, and purple Mystery Data are locked. That is not the case in this game - both blue and green Mystery Data are random and one-time, and the single purple Mystery Data in the game is also one-time.

Information Wanted:

- IronShld O, R, T (Froshell1 drop)
- Recov10 C (Spooky3 drop - low rank?)
- Recov10 G (Spooky1 drop - low-to-mid rank?)
- Recov50 E (Spooky3 drop - mid-rank?)
- Recov150 G (Spooky3 drop - mid-to-high rank?)
- Recov200 A (Spooky3 drop - high rank?)
- LifeAura H, K, M, P (Bass - haven't gotten far enough to challenge him in a non-cheating file, and yes, I'm like that.)

And now, to all of the sources that gave me some help while I was writing this guide:

* Original creators of the instant 9-Rank and S-Rank codes - I found them in my notes from over eight years ago, but I have no idea who made them, but thanks - it saved me a lot of heartache.

* Megaboy - His maps spared my sanity given the number of times I ran around the twisting and confusing Internet Areas of this game. Plus, his FAQ alerted me to which chips/codes are dropped by the virus, though he didn't have ranks.

* The Mechanical Maniacs - For the names of the viruses, especially the ones that didn't appear in later games or have an E-Reader card made of them.
