- Each little box gives the playing mode (all are 00 Agent), the overall mission number, what part of the mission each segment is, and where the mission part is. The part in parentheses is something I added in just to show the actual location (which is self-explanatory or not needed sometimes, anyway).

- When the objectives are listed, there will be another set of identical alphabetical tags under them. These have no relevance except to display dialogue said while achieving the goals. Anytime a letter is marked with an "N/A," it means that there is nothing displayed except the:

"Objective __ : Completed"

...which is always shown when an objective's been reached.

| 00 Agent: James Bond |
| Mission 1: Arkangelsk |
| Part i: Dam (Byelomorje Dam) |
\+++++-----/

BACKGROUND:

M16 has confirmed the existence of a secret chemical warfare facility at the Byelomorje dam, USSR. Its heavily guarded location and workings are a cause for major concern. Nerve gas produced there has been turning up in the hands of hostile regimes around the world and deals with international terrorists are rumored. This facility should be destroyed with extreme prejudice.

M BRIEFING:

The area around the dam is well defended against full scale military attack but a long agent stands a much better chance. The easiest way to gain entrance to the weapons factory will be to get down the face of the dam. Q had an idea about that.

Q BRANCH:

Information concerning shipping and contacts is stored within the dam. With this covert modem connected to their satellite link we can intercept the data when a backup is carried out. As for getting down the dam, use the bungee rope. At the bottom of the jump, use the piton gun. Simple.

MONEYPENNY:

Hardly a lover's leap, James. Be careful though, I hate to think of you as falling for anyone else.

| Part ii: Facility (Chemical Warfare Facility #2) |
\+++++++\|

BACKGROUND:

Inside the chemical weapons facility you should quickly and efficiently proceed to the bottling area and place demolition charges on the main gas tanks. Political considerations demand that collateral damage is minimized on this mission. Non-military personnel should be disregarded.

M BRIEFING:

You'll be working with 006 on this assignment, the bottling room is the rendezvous point. Don't forget to contact our double agent scientist before you leave, and warn him to get out. He will provide you with a decoder for the final security door. There are no women or casinos for a thousand miles, 007, so even you will be able to concentrate on this mission.

Q BRANCH:

Now listen carefully, Bond. Those bombs will be armed as soon as the last one is set. Don't be too close when you set them off or you'll go up in flames as well, and while you're at it, please try to bring back that door-opener undamaged for once. Too much rough handling like the last mission and it might go wrong at a bad time. Honestly, 007, sometimes I think you damage your equipment on purpose.

MONEYPENNY:

These chemicals could prove to be a match even for your pheromones, James. Don't take too many risks.

Bond: For England - Alec. It was too easy, Alec.

Trevelyan: Half of everything is luck.

Bond: ...and the other half?

[An alarm rings, soldiers enter the room.]

Trevelyan: Fate.

BACKGROUND:

The service runway is the obvious escape route from the Arkangelsk chemical weapons facility.

M BRIEFING:

006 knew this was going to be a risky mission. His sacrifice should give you enough time to find an aircraft. Keep a cool head and you'll get out alive. Just be certain to knock out the heavy gun emplacements and missile battery or they'll swat you out of the air like a silly fly.

Q BRANCH:

No time for gadgets here, 007. Just improvise with what you can find close at hand.

\+++++-----/

BACKGROUND:

A spy satellite has detected increased levels of activity at an old observatory complex near Severnaya (62.08n, 102.58e) in Russia. Other sources have confirmed the shipment of a large amount of computer hardware to that location, and an influx of skilled personnel.

M BRIEFING:

It might be coincidence that there is a new head of the Soviet Space Weapons Division, your old friend General Ourumov, or it might not.

Penetrate the base and find out what is going on. Building plans for the underground section would be ideal. They're unlikely to be just lying around so look for a safe - there's bound to be someone you can borrow a key from.

Q BRANCH:

I've looked over the recon photographs and I advise you to stay clear of the main bunker entrance by the helipad. However, there seems to be a ventilation tower nearby which would make an excellent spot for a covert entry. You ought to power down the comms dish, too, no point in letting them tell the whole of Russia you've dropped in.

M BRIEFING:

007, I want you to infiltrate this base and find out what the devil's going on there. The satellite photographs reveal that there has been recent underground excavation. We'd like to know the exact nature and planned extent of the workings. By the way, this is a covert operation. You may have to neutralize the security, but try not to be too obvious about it.

Q BRANCH:

You'll be doing some computer hacking on this mission, 007. I know you'd rather be cracking open a bottle of bubbly than cracking passwords, so I've taken the liberty of putting together a little gadget which will do the hard work for you. If you attach the data thief to their mainframe it should override any computer security measures and download the information we require.

| Part i: Launch Silo #4 |
\\+++++-----/

BACKGROUND:

M16 has become concerned that unscheduled test firings from a missile silo in Kirghizstan are being used to cover the launch of the Goldeneye weapons satellites. Deep intelligence reports suggest that this operation may well be outside the control of the former Soviet powers in the region.

M BRIEFING:

Infiltrate the silo and ascertain what is beign placed into orbit; if it is the satellites, recover their control circuitry and sabotage the launches. You are authorized to destroy the base if necessary. This is a matter of international security, 007. Consider the military personnel expendable.

Q BRANCH:

The layout of the missile silo means that a few carefully placed explosive charges will destroy the entire complex - concentrate on the fuel rooms (H4, C3, K2 and A1). 007, remember to treat the timed explosives with respect - you know what happened to 004 in Beirut. Oh, and get me a picture of the satellite, there's a good chap.

MONEYPENNY:

You leave at 1800 hours for Bishkek. James, just imagine those romantic nights in the steppes. Lying beneath the stars, the campfires twinkling on the hills - sounds like heaven. When you're in the arms of some dusky maiden, spare a thought for poor old me cooped up behind a desk in rainy London.

BACKGROUND:

A demonstration of the Pirate stealth helicopter by the French military has been unexpectedly postponed. Official channels insist that nothing is wrong but unofficially M16 has been asked to salvage a very tricky hostage situation on board the frigate La Fayette. It seems that the Janus crime syndicate will stop at nothing in its attempt to hijack the helicopter.

M BRIEFING:

This is the best chance we've had in years to get a lead on Janus. The French are prepared to play along with an entrapment scenario. We need you to place a tracker on the Pirate so that we can trace its movements after Janus steals it. This must go smoothly, 007. If the press gets a sniff of this, we'll all have egg on our faces.

Q BRANCH:

The French have kindly given us technical details of the Pirate so I've managed to convert this tracker bug into quite a clever little chap. It's undetectable and it locks out all weapon firing commands. Janus is also threatening to blow up the ship. They are most likely to have placed explosives on the bridge and in the engine room. Take care, 007, and be certain to use the bomb defuser correctly.

MONEYPENNY:

Xenia Onatopp, one of Janus' main operatives, may be on board the La Fayette. They say she has thighs of steel, James. Just be sure to stay out of their grasp.

BACKGROUND:

The Pirate helicopter was tracked to Severnaya where a Keyhole-1 ELINT satellite recorded a brief firefight. After the Pirate left, the same satellite observed a troop helicopter being made ready at a Spetznaz camp, 200 miles due south. The only way that we can get you there quickly is to drop you from a spy plane, and the Soviet Special Forces will be there before you.

M BRIEFING:

You should remember this place, 007. We need any evidence of Janus' presence there, and fast. Disable the troop helicopter so that nothing can be removed from the scene, and destroy their surveillance cameras.

This had to be an inside job, Bond. Find out who their contact was - the macabre way to do it would be to use their casualty list. Of course, you'd have to know who was there first.

Q BRANCH:

Right, I've altered a standard mine to take a ten-second fuse. There's only one, so don't play around with it. That should take care of their helicopter. This is a covert op, so I've fitted a silencer to your pistol. Satisfied? No? Well, tough; that's all your getting.

BACKGROUND:

Escape is the first priority. Find the staff and casualty lists, and the CCTV tape of your capture. If there are any witnesses, try to bring them out as well.

M BRIEFING:

Unbelievable, 007. If this gets out we'll be the laughing stock of the international community. As soon as you're back - IF you get back - you're getting a performance review. Only completing the objectives will give you a hop of keeping your rather checkered career intact.

Q BRANCH:

You've got your wits and that's about it, 007. Not much I can do to help you here. You might try to find your equipment again when you escape from the cell, though. It took me a lot of time to get all of that stuff together.

When the level first starts, Bond sees a woman in his cell nearby. They approach each other when the guard isn't looking.

Woman: Who are you, anyway?

Bond: The name's Bond, James Bond.

Woman: Natalya Fyodorovna Simonova

Bond: Charmed to meet you, Natalya. Why have you been locked up.

Natalya: They think that I am a traitor, - that I betrayed my countrymen.

Bond: ...and did you?

Natalya: Of course not. Ourumov stole the Goldeneye.

Bond: Colonel Arkady Grigorovich Ourumov? I've met him before.

Natalya: Ourumov is a general now. In charge of the Space Weapon program. What brings you to Siberia, James Bond?

Bond: I work for the British Government. I'm looking for a stolen helicopter.

Natalya: That doesn't matter anymore.

Bond: Why not?

Natalya: You are a spy and I am a traitor. We will be shot.

Bond: I don't think so. I have a cunning plan.

[Bond walks to the other side of the cell.]

Bond: Guard! My stomach hurts. I'm going to be sick.

Jailer: <sigh> You must think I was born yesterday.

Natalya: That worked well.

[The guard turns back to the patrol, but Bond persists.]

Bond: I'm really ill. Open the cell door!

Jailer: Shut up! Don't bother me again.

Natalya: Nice work.

[Bond uses the Watch Magnet Attract to get the key and opens the door.]

Jailer: Stop or I'll shoot!

[Bond kills the jailer and opens Natalya's cell.]

Natalya: You seem to know your way around, James. Have you been here before?

[Bond and Natalya go to the main control room.]

Natalya: I'm going to check the control console. Ourumov has activated the Goldeneye satellite! It's going to fire on Severnaya! We've got to escape!

BACKGROUND:

Following the Severnaya incident, M16 has lost track of the Pirate helicopter. Presumably the bugging device has been located and destroyed. Natalya Simonova, who returned to St. Petersburg against our advice, has gone missing. We can only assume that she has been abducted by the Janus syndicate in a belated attempt to cover their tracks.

M BRIEFING:

The situation is critical, 007. Janus known we're on to them and they're taking control. We're going to circumvent the usual channels on this one. I've arranged contact with ex-KGB agent, Valentin Zukovsky, in Statue Park, St. Petersburg. He claims he can set up a meeting with Janus. Apparently, the head of Janus wants to see you in person. Frankly, I'm uneasy about this but it's all we've got to Bond: With an ex-KGB agent meeting an M16 operative in the middle of St. Petersburg?

Valentin: Ha! I never thought I'd find myself helping you, but things have changed in Russia. Janus will meet you by Lenin's statue. Beware him, he's a Lienz Cossack traitor. Now I must leave - the guards are out in force and I fear they may mistake me for a spy!

B: [Bond goes to Lenin's statue after meeting Valentin. Janus soon comes out.]

Janus: Good evening, 007. Put the gun away. It's insulting to think I haven't anticipated your every move.

Bond: Alec? You're Janus?

Janus: Yes, the M16 'hero', back from the dead.

Bond: But why, Alec? I trusted you.

Janus: Trust can be misplaced, James. My parents trusted the British government. They were betrayed with all the other Lienz Cossacks. I will have my revenge.

Bond: What have you done with Natalya?

Janus: The girl? I've left her with the Pirate helicopter near the park gates. We're finished with them. I have the Goldeneye firing key now. By the way, the helicopter's rigged to blow in 3 minutes. I doubt she'll survive.

C: N/A

D: [Bond runs to the helicopter and finds Natalya, unconscious.]

Bond: Natalya! Quickly, this way! The helicopter's about to explode.

[The helicopter explodes.]

Bond: I have to find the helicopter flight recorder. Wait for me at the gates.

E: N/A

[After finding the flight recorder, Bond returns to see Natalya being held captive once more, with an unfamiliar face leading the pack.]

Mishkin: Ah, Mr. Bond, I see you've taken it upon yourself to liven up the nightlife in St. Petersburg. Blowing up helicopters, shooting guards - quite a jolly little soiree. Well, it's time to stop now, before any more people get hurt. I'd like to ask you and Miss Simonova some questions about the Severnaya incident. Perhaps you'd like to lead the way to Military Intelligence HQ. There's a truck waiting outside. Come along, Mr. Bond, just step through the gates and we can clear up this misunderstanding.

[Bond walks through the gates so he and Natalya can live another day.]

Guard: All lies, Mr. Bond. You are nothing but a terrorist. You will be executed along with that foolish girl.

Bond: Natalya has done nothing wrong. She knows what happened at Severnaya.

Guard: Really? Well, we shall have to ask her about that. I'm sure she can be persuaded to answer our questions more fully.

Mishkin: It appears you were correct, Mr. Bond. General Ourumov is our traitor.

Bond: Even trusted friends are capable of betrayal.

Mishkin: A costly lesson. Do you need the black box from the stolen helicopter?

Bond: Yes, it proves that Janus was involved in the Severnaya incident...

Mishkin: It is in the safe. I must inform the Politburo of Ourumov's deceit. Good-bye, Mr. Bond.

A: N/A

B: [Bond finds Natalya being held at gunpoint by Ourumov. Trevelyan and Xenia are also present.]

Trevelyan: James, what an unpleasant surprise. Do come in.

That's close enough! Two targets. Time for one shot.
The girl or the mission?

[Bond shoots Ourumov, killing him.]

Trevelyan: You'll never win, James.

[An armored door then separates James and Natalya from the other two and the windows become blocked, too. A panel on the floor is sealed, but James can open it.]

Trevelyan: Good luck with the floor, James. It shouldn't take more than a minute.

[Natalya gets on the computer as James works on the floor.]

Natalya: Boris is still backing up his files. I can find out where they are going. He's in Cuba! Now if I just had time to crack his password... Got it! You're a slug-head, Boris!

[James exits.]

Natalya: I'm coming, James!

[Natalya follows him to safety.]

BACKGROUND:

Satellite reconnaissance has been able to locate any installation near the coordinates recovered from the Janus computers in St. Petersburg. It seems likely that a ground search will be necessary. The CIA has provided you with a light aircraft. Underfly Janus radar and parachute in to the drop, proceed through the jungle eliminating any opposition and attempt to locate the Janus base.

M BRIEFING:

Miss Simonova will be with you on this mission. If Janus is operating a Goldeneye satellite, her computing skills will be essential when you try to disable their systems. Jack Wade has given her some basic firearms training and he thinks she'll be able to carry her weight in a combat situation. Be careful though, 007, remember she isn't an experienced operative like yourself.

Q BRANCH:

You'll know you're on the right trail if you encounter Janus troops or automated defenses. Be especially wary of their robotic drone guns. I'm giving you some triggered mines for their ammo dump, try not to waste them on silly things. Oh, and look out for that Xenia woman, 007, I think she's after you. You lucky devil.

MONEYPENNY:

A hot date in the rainforest? With two women! Shame on you James.

BACKGROUND:

The Janus Control Center has been located in an underground complex in the Cuban jungle.

M BRIEFING:

Into the lion's den, 007. Well, just be careful. Remember that you and Miss Simonova are a team, it's critical that you protect her while she's hacking into the Janus computers. With any luck she'll be able to stop the Goldeneye from firing.

Q BRANCH:

While you're there old boy, see if you can't erase their databases. The details of Janus' criminal bankrolls are stored on specially armored mainframe units. That information is worth millions to Janus - I'm sure you'll find some way of deleting it.

MONEYPENNY:

You know, James, she's not the only woman who can operate a computer.

A: Protect Natalya
B: Disable Goldeneye satellite
C: Destroy armored mainframes

M BRIEFING:

Don't jeopardize the mission by going for the man, Bond - nobody needs a dead hero. You'll be on your own but CIA combat support will be waiting. Find a radio and inform Jack Wade of the exact location of the dish and he'll send in the cavalry.

Q BRANCH:

The satellite communications dish is exposed. If you remove the water pumps, Janus will be unable to hide it again. Destroy the servo control consoles close to the pumps and be sure to disable the master console.

MONEYPENNY:

Doing a spot of spelunking? Well, don't mess your trousers up, James.

BACKGROUND:

Janus control communications have been jammed and the Goldeneye satellite orbit is decaying. Only Trevelyan and his personal bodyguard remain unaccounted for.

M BRIEFING:

You know my feelings about personal vendettas interfering with mission success, 007. However, in this case, I think we can turn a blind eye to whatever happens out there. Be careful, and remember,

- you are licensed to kill.

Q BRANCH:

Would you believe it, 007? There's another blasted control thingy actually on the antenna cradle. Trevelyan might be able to realign the antenna and get one last firing message through to the satellite. Get out there and destroy it! We don't want things going pear-shaped at the last minute.

MONEYPENNY:

The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, James. You know I won't sleep soundly until you get back to England in one piece.

Trevelyan: I was always better, James.

[...and finally meet up on a hanging platform at the bottom of the cradle. Bond shoots Alec first, sending him plummeting off the side.]

Alec: For England, James?

Bond: No. For me.

[A helicopter comes to rescue James and it flies off. Mission and storyline complete. However, there are two optional places that can be explored, too. I'll do those as well, but are fairly short anyway.]
