Note, that if you've asked me for permission but don't see your site on the list above, don't worry about it, as it's a real pain to update each time everyone asks me to use this guide on their site. So as long as you've asked me, yes, you can put it up on your site. The sites above are the ones that don't have to ask to use them.

Chrono Trigger is copyright Squaresoft 1995. Please do not leech any of this to make your own FAQ out of it. Unless you have MY permission DO NOT take anything at all from this guide. Don't edit, don't do anything to it and submit it without e-mailing me with permission first. You can print it out, but only for personal use, no selling this! Summing it up, do anything for your own personal benefit (apart from reading it) without asking me, AND YOU'LL BURN IN HELL!!!!

To get in touch, e-mail me at magus@dcmagus.com

My ICQ# is 34601221

My webpage is <http://www.dcmagus.com>

My MSN contact is dcmagus@hotmail.com, but any email sent to that address will most likely be ignored, as I don't check that account

My AIM name is dcmagus

Be warned that I'm only on the net twice a week, don't expect replies from me which are ten minutes after you've sent the mail. Here's some guidelines about sending me mail:

1. Make sure you put the title of the game you're asking about in the subject. I've made a fair few FAQs, and it's a bit hard to work things out sometimes.

2. If it's an FAQ, make sure that it's not already in the guide!!! If it is, I'll do my best to ignore it.

If it's not in there, make sure that the details you provide are, well, DETAILED, and not sketchy. Examples are "Hi need to know how to get past this part, i'm in a room and stuck", I need to know where you are, etc.

3. Ask nicely. So far, most people have, but if your mail goes along the lines of "Hi, need code for B2, reply within the next hour otherwise I'll bomb you" will not get you anywhere.

That's it. Sorry for being a pain, but it had to be said.
