current wife Debra as his valet. As it got close to a ppv match with Four Horsemen member, and Debra's ex-husband, Steve "Mongo" McMichael, Jarrett jumped to the WWF. Debra stayed on and hired Alex Wright and then Bill Goldberg to fight her ex-husband. Debra eventually put up a stipulation in a match where if Mongo won, she would never appear on WCW television again. He won and Debra left and joined Jarrett in the WWF. Before she joined him, Jarrett played a country singer who was managed by Tennessee Lee and he also was joined by another tag team whose name I cannot remember. Later on, his trademark hair was shaved off (by DX members I think.) He then started on his road to superstardom. He began wearing a t-shirt that said "Don't P**s Me Off" and used guitars to knock out his opponents. He later had Debra join him as his manager and also became tag partners with Owen Hart. He and Owen became multiple tag titles before Owen's untimely death at the Over the Edge ppv. After that, Jarrett won both the European and Intercontinental titles and got yet a second valet in Miss Kitty. Around this time, Jarrett began going on an anti-woman rampage saying they should "be in the kitchen, and nowhere near a wrestling ring." This ended with Chyna winning the Intercontinental title from him at a ppv with the help of Debra. Jarrett made a surprise redebut in WCW at the Nitro the night after, hitting Buff Bagwell with a guitar. Since then, Jarrett has become a superstar, first being the self proclaimed Chosen One of the Powers That Be, then a member, and later leader, of the New World Order 2000, then a major member of the ill fated New Blood, and now has been a United States title holder, and a four time WCW World Heavyweight Champion!
